

“Sometimes you have to lose your mind to find yourself” ...

*After three months of recording, songwriter Bree decides to take a road trip to envision the mix of her songs. A mysterious triangle on a random map suggests a destination. Two friends will tag along. Jeff, a head in the clouds writer, and Wyatt, a self absorbed Hollywood type. Thus begins the music driven shamanic journey called... This is not dying

A chance encounter with a doctor; the trio come to his aid by giving him a ride home when his truck won't start. It turns out the Dr. is a psychotherapist/shaman, using psilocybin mushrooms to facilitate his radical therapy. Soon, the three friends have decided to follow the white rabbit. One road; three trips.

Wyatt's trip soon becomes a nightmare. All his wealth and power cannot save him from the loss of his illusion of control. Can he escape the monsters which lurk in the darkness of his subconscious? Once the blockages of his fear and egotism begin to dissolve, Wyatt communicates with older, wiser portions of himself from a time when he still knew how to be happy.

Bree's journey is a more tranquil experience. Basking in the sunlight of nature, she enjoys joyful communion with animals and nature spirits. Having long been on a shamanic quest through art, Bree's adventure moves beyond personal issues of ego and mind, into dealing with the world by effecting change and inner growth.

Jeff takes refuge from his overactive imagination. Searching for the meaning of life amongst the endless details of his family diaries, he becomes overwhelmed. Jeff's desire to save the world through environmentalism brings several characters to life in an astral traveling journey to the giant Sequoias, and beyond.

Bringing multi-mediums of artistic expression together to create a potpourri of transcendence.

9 people, 5 days, 10k; art drenched anti-formula experimental;
therapy session + music video + improv theater workshop + reality show + indie film.

Breaking the 4th wall.

Feedback

"I didn't want it to end"! Micaela Rodriguiz age 15

"I want to watch this over and over again, I loved it!" Donna Mae Perdew age 55

"Cute and fun!" Thao Thi Pham age 28

“An enchanted modern journey of the human psyche. A prophetic display of humor and emotion; and the intellectual avenues that plague our minds everyday surrounding the subject of our lives.” Alikea Tree

OrangeRay Creative Lab

A film by Morrison-Merritt

OrangeRay.com