Regarding Enrica Sciandrone,

I first worked with Enrica 10 years ago where she was assistant to the composer Javier Navarette. It was a most technically challenging project for her as she needed to deal with a multitude of tracks, merge and re-organise so that I received everything ready to orchestrate. This she did extremely well, and in a very timely fashion.

During the ensuing years there have been many other projects, but one which stands out is LIFE with music by Jon Ekstrand. Here she needed to again take many tracks, merge as well as quantise etc but also, deal with a very large A-tonal aspect to the score. She always presented me with a clear and extremely well laid out xml file for me to take and orchestrate with.

I have also conducted some of Enrica's compositions, which were a delight as they were full of ideas, sometimes delicate, sometimes powerful, sometime romantic, but always skilfully executed. She is clearly a most talented composer who is not only skilled in composition and orchestration but is very quick to complete the task at hand.

I have always found Enrica, easy to get on with, most conscientious and willing to work all hours of the night to get the project finished when the deadlines loom, which is a quality necessary in this business of ours.
