

This is not dying

On the doorstep of the Sequoias; this music driven shamanic journey begins; the destination is synchronistically orchestrated by a loving Universe. Three friends; three timelines; all paths lead to death...of ego!

Magical metamorphosis, as the characters follow breadcrumbs to the dark forest of the psyche.

Improvisational, with multi-mediums of artistic expression, woven into an organic storytelling.

Songwriter Bree decides to take a road trip. A mysterious triangle on a random map suggests a destination. Two friends will tag along. Thus begins the music driven, shamanic journey: This is not dying. A chance encounter with a psychotherapist/shaman who uses psilocybin mushrooms to facilitate his radical therapy and soon, the friends have decided to follow the white rabbit. One road; three trips.

All of Wyatt's wealth and power cannot save him from the loss of his illusion of control. Bree's journey is a more tranquil experience. Having long been on a shamanic quest through art, her adventure moves beyond personal issues of ego and mind, into dealing with the world by effecting change and inner growth.

Searching for the meaning of life amongst the endless details of his family diaries, Jeff is overwhelmed. His desire to save the world through environmentalism brings several characters to life in an astral traveling journey to the giant Sequoias, and beyond.

9 people, 5 days, 10k; art drenched anti-formula experimental; therapy session + music video + improv theater workshop + reality show + indie film.
Breaking the 4th wall.

"Sometimes you have to lose your mind to find yourself."