"A farewell to my shadow is not my death; it's my rebirth in darkness."

— Munia Khan

"Shadow is an intelligent artist; it creates its works in places where there are already great beauties!"

— Mehmet Murat ildan

Through popular culture, we've been told that what lurks in the shadows is ominous and dangerous. In literature, shadows have often been depicted as the negative counterpart of light. In this three part workshops series, we'll examine what our individual and collective associations are with our 'shadows', to give voice and breath to that which lives there.

This workshop series is open to all levels and will consist of guided writing prompts, aimed at personal excavation of stories, shared resources and knowledge, introduction to spoken word and storytelling and assistance with editing.

Space is limited. Please email info@lishai.ca to register.
